Identity Theft Jackpots

(and how you can safeguard against them)

Your Trash Can

Shred anything that has your full name and address before you throw it out, including:

- Envelopes
- Bank statements
- Expired credit cards
- Cellphone bills
- ATM receipts
- Paycheck stubs

Your
Phone

Have a password-protected lock on your home screen.

Take advantage of available features, like location tracking or remote wipe.

Public Wi-Fi networks are not secure.

Avoid checking your bank accounts or doing your online shopping at the coffee shop, airport or other Wi-Fi hotspot.

Don't store sensitive information on your phone.

Avoid storing passwords or login information in note-taking apps.

The PIN Pad

Keep your card in sight at all times.

Use your hand to block the buttons when entering your PIN.

Choose a good PIN:

- Avoid PINs derived from your birthday or address
- Avoid easy-to-guess PINs, like “1234” or “0000”
- Use different PINs for each card
- Your ATM PIN should be different from your phone unlock number

Your Mailbox

Memorize your billing cycles.

If you suddenly stop receiving mail, it could be a sign of mail tampering or an illegal change of address.

Lock it up.

Use a mailbox with a lock to deter identity thieves.

Your Computer

Keep your software up-to-date, including:

- Operating system
- Anti-virus
- App updates
- Spam filters

Look out for sketchy emails:

- Suspicious password reset requests
- Requests for personal information or money
- Unexpected deliveries or tracking numbers

Don't overshare:

- Is your birthday and year listed on Facebook?
- Can your Instagram followers tell when you're out of the house for long periods of time?
- Think before you post
